Colorado		The Colorado Department of Labor and Employment (CDLE) adopted the Colorado HELP Rules to require up to four days of paid sick leave for employees in select industries to attend to flu-related symptoms and treatment applying to the following industries: Leisure and hospitality; Food services; Child care; Education; Home healthcare; otherwise high-risk individuals; Operating a nursing home; and Operating a community living facility. An employer in any of the above industries must provide up to four days of paid sick leave for an employee (A) with flu-like symptoms, and (B) who is being tested for COVID-19. The paid sick leave ends if an employee receives a negative COVID-19 test result. Exceptions to Employer Responsibilities The Rules “do not require an employer to offer additional days of paid sick leave if it already offers all employees an amount of paid leave sufficient to comply with” the four-day paid leave requirement. An employee who has already exhausted his or her paid sick leave allotment, but then has flu-like symptoms and is being tested for COVID-19, is entitled to the additional paid sick days Reference: https://www.colorado.gov/pacific/cdle/information-and-resources-coronavirus
